

Prince Of Peas Made $3,000 From Four Acres Of Early Peas

Here To Help In Revival Campaign

REV. GEORGE R. MERRILL, D.D.

CRYSTAL SPRINGS, Miss., March 20. (Sp.)—Probably the happiest and most independent man in this part of Mississippi is Sol Lamar, a truck-growing farmer, who for many years has been dubbed "The Prince of Peas," because of the wonderful success he has met with in growing this particular vegetable. Last season on a patch of 4 acres in peas he grew a yield that brought him the tidy sum of $750 per acre and was the first man to make a shipment. This year it would seem that he will pass the performance of last season. He has planted his pea crop this season just across the creek from where he had the four acres last year, this being done because truck growers have learned that it is not best to plant the same crop on the same ground every year, and he has in this valley 18 acres of the prettiest peas in the country. This pea patch stretches as far as the eye can see along the creek down the valley.

From present indications Lamar will continue to wear the title of "Prince of Peas," as he has his peas all stuck and strung and Friday he observed the first bloom while Sunday afternoon the entire patch was in flower and Mr. Lamar claims that he has found several peas already on the vines. This assures an early shipment and he thinks he will be shipping in large quantities by April 15.

Besides the peas Lamar has a large acreage in cabbage.

Besides this ideal vegetable farm, situated just one mile from the city, Mr. Lamar has about 200 chickens in the country and Sunday took from the incubator 100 chicks. He gathers eggs by the dozen and sells them in the markets in town. A herd of fine cows, one of which he has refused $500, makes up the farm.

TELEGRAPH BRIEFS

WASHINGTON—Following completion of his examination by the senate investigating committee, Ludwig C. A. K. The company had offered an increase of two cents.

NEW YORK—Despite the severest winter New York state has experienced in years, the price of ice to the family trade will be raised 20 per cent on April 1, according to announcement here by West M.
